ANNOUNCEMENT ****

WASHINGTON, DC – Maggie L. Fox, President and CEO of The Alliance for Climate Protection issued the following statement on today's announcement from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to regulate greenhouse gas emissions under the Clean Air Act:

"Americans can breathe a bit easier in the wake of today's historic announcement from the EPA declaring greenhouse gas pollution a danger to the public's health and welfare. The U.S. Congress first passed the Clean Air Act in 1970 to protect the public's health, and the EPA's use of the Act's authority to regulate the gases causing the climate crisis means that not only is the time for science denial over, but the federal government will also be complying with the law of the land. As the world convenes for the next two weeks in Copenhagen to negotiate an international climate agreement, President Obama and all of America will have our greatest opportunity yet to show the world that we are fully committed to building a global clean energy economy and solving the climate crisis."
